National Healthy Worksite Program

The CDC National Healthy Worksite Program (NHWP) will provide employers and interested organizations nationwide access to worksite health training and resources beginning in summer 2012. These webinars focus on practical, skill-building training for employers to implement comprehensive worksite health programs.

This first in the series of five trainings provided by the CDC will discuss the key components of a worksite health program; the relationship between individual employee health and organizational performance; and how to create leadership support and build a strong infrastructure and culture for worksite health. Attendees will also have the opportunity to hear the latest information about the recently implemented National Healthy Worksite Program.

NHWP

The NHWP is designed to assist employers in implementing science and practice-based prevention and health promotion strategies that will lead to specific, measureable health outcomes to reduce chronic disease rates. The NHWP seeks to promote good health through prevention, reduce chronic illness and disability, and improve productivity outcomes that contribute to employers' competitiveness.

Training Goals

- Provide forums to improve the knowledge, skills, awareness and capacity of employers in building, enhancing and maintaining healthy worksite programs.
- Provide access and opportunities for employers to network with peers and experts on worksite health issues.
- Provide and disseminate information, tools and resources produced by the NHWP.
